

Guidance Note for Proparco's Clients: Preventing and Addressing Gender-Based Violence and Harassment (GBVH)

Introduction

Gender-based Violence and Harassment (GBVH) prevention is embedded within Proparco financing agreements and requirements. This Guidance Note (GN) is a tool to support Proparco's clients in implementing effective strategies for preventing and addressing GBVH in company operations within the workforce (internally) and in the supply chain and community (externally). This GN includes an overview of the meaning and impacts of GBVH, how to undertake a GBVH assessment, mitigation measures and how to establish internal (workforce) and external (supply customer/community) GBVH grievance mechanisms.

What is GBVH?

GBVH is an umbrella term for *"violence and harassment directed at persons because of their sex or gender, or affecting persons of a particular sex or gender disproportionately, and includes sexual harassment"*¹. It includes sexual exploitation and abuse (SEA)² involving the abuse of power for sexual purposes. GBVH can be an isolated incident, a repeated behaviour, or a persistent pattern. While women and girls are disproportionately affected, GBVH can affect anyone.

GBVH can occur anywhere and in any sector. It manifests in various ways based on risk factors such as local political, socio-economic and gender disparities, as well as operational risks such as the workforce composition, company approach to safeguarding, size and complexity of the supply chain, and the location.

Key terms used for GBVH management are provided in GBVH Terms.

This figure shows some examples of how GBVH can manifest in projects/businesses:

² SEA occurs in a work or work-related environment, including program settings and work travel. SEA is often used interchangeably with GBVH. Most DFIs use the term GBVH, while SEA is more commonly used in the NGO context.

³ Experiences of violence and harassment at work: A global first survey (available at <https://www.ilo.org/publications/major-publications/experiences-violence-and-harassment-work-global-first-survey>)

The consequences of GBVH are far-reaching, affecting multiple aspects of a person's life including:

Physical Health	Mental Health and Well-being	Sexual and Reproductive Health	Economic Status
Injuries, long-term health issues, disabilities and fatality.	Depression, anxiety, post-traumatic stress disorder, and suicidal thoughts or suicide.	Unwanted and/or teenage pregnancies, damage to internal reproductive organs and sexually transmitted infections.	Undermining financial autonomy and control over personal resources.

GBVH can have detrimental human and financial consequences, and risks should therefore be managed in proportion to the size and nature of the business.

Why Is Managing GBVH Risks Important To Your Business?

GBVH prevention and redressal is essential for maintaining a positive business environment, safeguarding the workforce, protecting the company's reputation and enabling financial performance. Below are the main ways that GBVH can affect company performance.

Risks must be identified and managed with appropriate safeguards in place.

How to Identify, Prevent, Address, Respond, and Monitor GBVH

- Understand and identify GBVH risks: Undertake a GBVH risk assessment to identify key factors that may trigger or exacerbate GBVH.
- Prevent GBVH: Develop policies and procedures, as well as raise awareness and undertake training. Develop a GBVH Action Plan to mitigate risks.
- Address and respond to allegations: Safety and confidentiality is key in responding to GBVH in order to avoid retaliation or marginalisation of those affected. A survivor-centered approach⁴ should be taken in grievance redressal.
- Monitor and report GBVH: Establish key indicators for monitoring GBVH mitigation measures and develop reporting tools to track incidents.

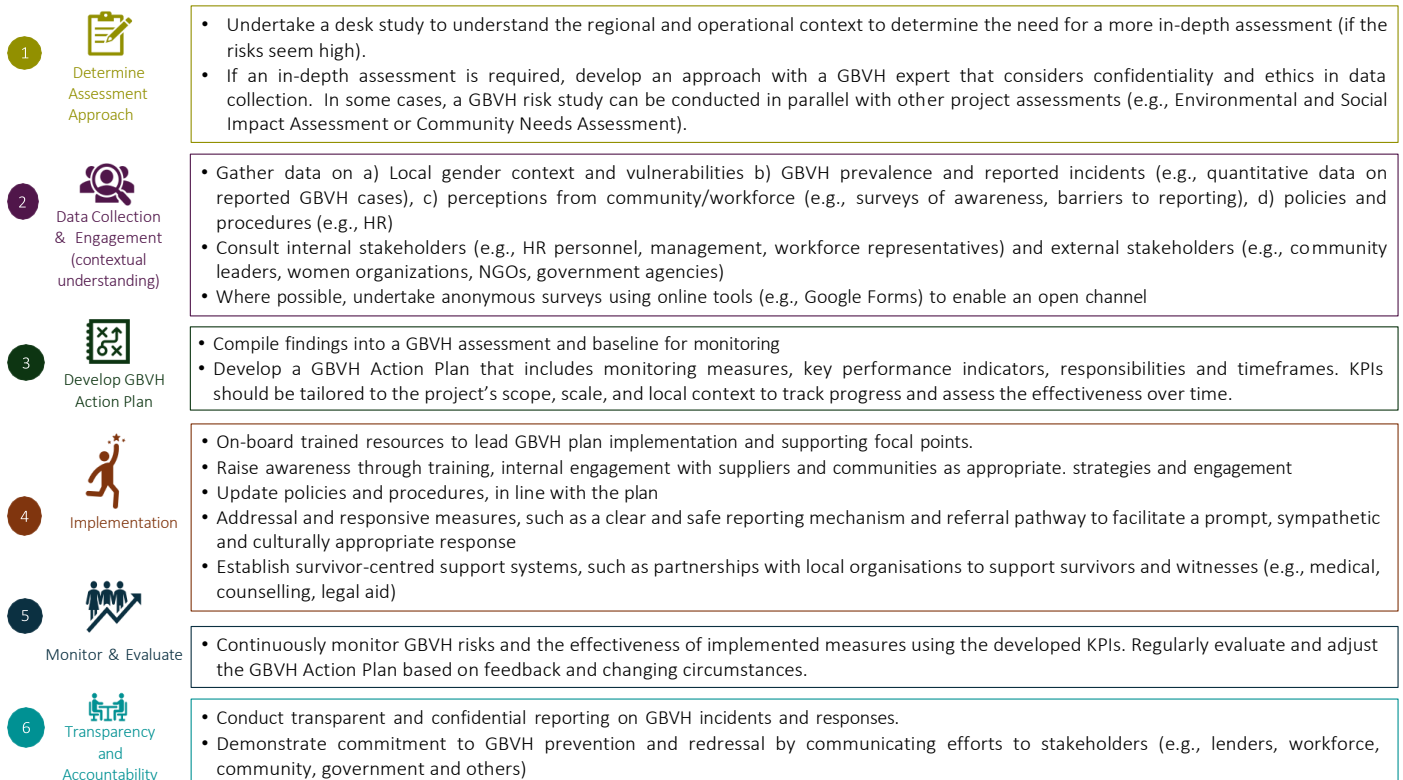

The nature and magnitude of GBVH risks vary, necessitating the need for assessments to identify the ways that GBVH may occur based on the context, and the potential consequences.

GBVH Assessment and Action Plan

A GBVH Assessment is a systematic process designed to identify, understand, and mitigate GBVH risks in investments and at the project level looking at the internal context (in the workforce) and externally (community and supply chain), as well as the capacity and resources to prevent, address and respond to them.

Developing a GBVH Assessment and GBVH Action Plan Involves the following activities.

⁴ People affected by GBVH are referred to as 'survivors' to highlight their strength and resilience. This approach shifts the focus from helplessness to empowerment and recovery. It fosters dignity, respect, and support, encouraging healing and reinforcing people's ability to overcome adversity.

It is important to have trained professionals on board to support GBVH assessment and build capacity to enable a safe and ethical approach that does not put participants at risk of harm during data collection.

The following actions will contribute to creating an enabling and safe environment and should be implemented in proportion to the risks identified. It is important to note that GBVH can be more prevalent in some cultures and sectors than others. Therefore comprehensive training and mechanisms will need to be implemented to support implementation and create behavioural change.

Leadership Commitment

- Risk management. Integration of GBVH risks into the overall company risk management system and adopt measures to facilitate buy-in of GBVH policies, e.g., workshops, campaigns, social media, etc.
- Formal commitment. Policies encompass a formal commitment to address GBVH by the Board of Directors.
- Resources. Corporate management include sufficient human resources to implement GBVH policies.

Robust Policies and Procedures

- Participatory. Developed based on feedback from internal (e.g., workforce) and external (e.g., communities, NGOs etc) stakeholders.
- Practical and effective. Include measures to prevent, respond and address GBVH that can be regularly reviewed.
- Accountability. Include disciplinary measures and accountability in GBVH redressal (e.g., termination of contracts).
- Easy access. Easily accessible and communicated through various channels.
- Procurement and contracts. Internal policies ensure that GBVH is prevented early on by considering contractors/supply chain are in alignment with company's GBVH requirements and included contracts.

Regular Training & Awareness Raising

- Regular trainings. Regular internal participatory trainings enabling continuous awareness raising and internal capacity to prevent and address GBVH.
- Multiple audiences. Training provided to supply chain workers (e.g., managers, employees, security staff) where required to support capacity development and to raise awareness of company requirements.

Responsive and Supporting Grievance Mechanisms

- Participatory and tailored. Tailored internal workforce and external community/stakeholder GM's designed in consultation with users and with consideration for intersectionality, enabling inclusivity and accessibility.
- Safe and accessible. Multiple reporting channels incorporating anonymity, safety and non-retaliation for the survivor and witnesses. GM channels, procedures and timings are clearly communicated and disseminated to all.
- Resourceful. GM staffed with trained professionals capable of addressing GBVH adopting a survivor centred-approach, including external service providers/referral pathways to provide support.

Safe Work Environment

- Workspaces: Create safe spaces (e.g., well-lit hallways, parking lots, and rooms; separate, private, and secure restrooms; designated safe zones where stakeholders can report incidents).
- Inappropriate behaviours: Internal communications sources and posters enforce codes of conduct to prevent unwanted actions (e.g., zero tolerance for offensive language, jokes, or gestures) and promote good behaviours.

Establishing a GBVH Grievance Mechanism

Establishing a robust Grievance Mechanism enables allegations to be promptly addressed by qualified experts and effective measures are implemented to prevent harm and recurrence. The grievance mechanism should draw on local and third-party resources to act as a referral pathway for reports and provide survivor support. Useful GBVH directories are 'No More' (<https://nomoredirectory.org>) and resources for survivors are available at 'Me Too' (<https://metoomvmt.org/how-can-we-help-you/>).

Addressing GBVH allegations should be done with care adopting a survivor-centred approach, and based on the following principles:

- | | |
|--|---|
|  Survivor-centered approach | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allegations investigated based on the survivors needs and preferences, as well as creating an enabling environment where they are heard and respected. |
|  Do No Harm | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A professional and sensitive approach should be maintained throughout the investigation without risk of causing further trauma or harm. |
|  Safety and Confidentiality | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Prioritise the safety and confidentiality of the survivor by undertaking investigations in safe spaces and implementing formal procedures to manage sensitive information. |
|  Expert-Led | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Collaborate with trained professionals and / or local organisations to ensure allegations are conducted appropriately and to create awareness of available support measures, such as legal counselling and medical assistance. |
|  Planned and Gradual Implementation | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Step by step approach that enables careful planning and avoids rushed or extensive actions that could harm survivors or prove ineffective. |

A step-by-step process for addressing allegations is presented below and should be adapted according to the situation, bearing in mind the key principles. Embedding a survivor-centred GBVH reporting mechanism within the GM necessitates thoughtful planning and execution, as follows:

Key elements of establishing and implementing a GBVH grievance mechanism and referral pathways include:

- ✓ Worker and Community Grievance Mechanisms: Implement accessible and culturally sensitive GMs tailored for both employees and community members.
- ✓ Clear Guidance: Detailed guidance to trained experts on which incidents should be reported, what essential data should be collected, and strict confidentiality protocols.
- ✓ Multiple Submission Channels: Provide various reporting channels for submitting complaints, including anonymous claims. This includes accessible online platforms, anonymous hotlines, and in-person meetings with designated HR managers and Community Liaison Officers.
- ✓ Trusted Resources: Designate trained GBVH focal points and resources to raise awareness and enhance trust in the GM, in particular among women and vulnerable groups.
- ✓ Investigation Procedures: Establish transparent investigation protocols with clear timelines and defined responsibilities to ensure consistency and fairness in handling cases. Ensure all parties involved are promptly informed of investigation progress and outcomes, maintaining transparency and accountability.
- ✓ Wide Dissemination: Ensure comprehensive dissemination of the GM throughout the workforce and externally. This includes conducting regular training sessions and providing materials (e.g., booklets, online resources, social media pages, etc) to educate stakeholders about the GM's purpose, procedures, and confidentiality protocols.
- ✓ In-house and Third-party Providers: Utilise a mix of internal experts and third-party providers who are well-trained and capable of conducting thorough investigations as required. Recognise the necessity of impartial third-party investigations in certain cases, even when internal staff are trained.

Important Notes

The absence of GBVH reports doesn't imply the absence of GBVH or its risks. It is essential to distinguish between GBVH risks (potential occurrences) and GBVH reports (specific incidents or concerns raised).

Companies and investors should proactively prevent GBVH and encourage reporting while preparing reactive measures to respond effectively and mitigate impact when incidents occur

Ongoing GBVH Monitoring and Reporting

GBVH risk monitoring is paramount to enable effective GBVH management. As new risks may emerge and existing ones evolve, regular risk reassessment becomes imperative to maintain an ongoing understanding of the country and project risks. This monitoring process not only helps companies identify areas needing improvement in prevention and response efforts but also provides assurance to investors (Proparco) that meaningful actions are being taken. KPIs provide measurable benchmarks against which progress in GBVH prevention and response can be evaluated such as incident reporting rates, response times, training effectiveness, and the implementation of policy enhancements. Regular internal reporting ensures that decision-makers are informed of trends and challenges, facilitating informed adjustments to strategies and interventions as needed.

Guidance Note Take-Aways

Here are the key takeaways from this GN that will help mitigate and address GBVH in your company, ultimately creating a safer and more productive environment for everyone.

Addressing GBVH is essential to avoid: a) reputational damage, litigation and access to finance, b) health and safety risks, c) Reduced productivity and retention, d) lack of access to market.

The safety of survivors in GBVH risk assessment and grievance is paramount in preventing harm and retaliation.

GBVH prevention requires a commitment to conscious and proactive leadership, the implementation of detailed and comprehensive GBVH policies, and ongoing training.

Establishing supportive frameworks is crucial to prioritize the safety and non-retaliation of all stakeholders, encompassing the workforce, contractors, supply chain partners, service users, and communities.

Monitoring is paramount to assess GBVH management performance and prevalence, as well as the identification of new or evolving risks.

Proparco Tools and Technical Assistance

Proparco has actively investigated the prevalence of GBVH in various sectors and countries. Clients can benefit from Proparco's Technical Assistance facility and tools for conducting their own GBVH assessments in Proparco-financed projects. Click here to find out more (Gender equality | Proparco - Groupe Agence Française de Développement). Proparco Project teams also include E&S specialists who will be able to provide some guidance on preventing and managing GBVH-related topics.

Note that Proparco is not responsible for identifying, conducting due diligence (DD) or recruiting such organisations. Investees are responsible for mapping and checking the experience and capacity of reputable GBVH organisations, as well as conducting staff background checks as part of the onboarding and DD process.

GBVH Terms

Gender	Socially constructed roles, attributes, opportunities and relationships that a given society considers appropriate for men and women. These expectations differ from society to society and change over time. In many societies, it has been recognised that there are more than two genders. However, "men/boys" and "women/girls" are the most recognised genders.
GBVH	Umbrella term for violence and harassment directed at persons because of their sex or gender, or affecting persons of a particular sex or gender disproportionately, and includes sexual harassment.
Host community	A community that hosts a project or displaced persons associated with a project.
Sexual Exploitation, Abuse and Harassment	Refers to sexual exploitation, abuse and sexual harassment. SEAH always occurs in a work environment, or work-related environment, including in a programme setting or work travel. ⁵
Sex	Refers to the external physical differences that act as a marker upon which male or female sex is assigned at birth.
Sexual harassment	Any form of unwanted verbal, non-verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person, in particular when creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.
Sexual exploitation	Any actual or attempted abuse of a position of vulnerability, differential power or trust for sexual purposes, including profiting monetarily, socially or politically from the sexual exploitation of another.
Sexual abuse / Child sexual abuse	The actual or threatened physical intrusion of a sexual nature, whether by force or under unequal or coercive conditions. All sexual activity with children (as defined by the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child as any person under the age of 18) is child sexual abuse or underage sex, regardless of the age of maturity or consent locally. Claiming to have misunderstood the age of a child cannot be defended in a court of law.
Sexual harassment	Any form of unwanted verbal, non-verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person, in particular when creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.
Sex worker	Persons who receive money or goods in exchange for consensual sexual services or erotic performances, either regularly or occasionally. While the term 'sex worker' recognises that sex is work, the term 'prostitution' connotes criminality and immorality. Sex workers sell sexual services as a livelihood either because it is the best option they have due to poverty, because it offers better pay and flexible hours compared to other jobs, or as a way to express their sexuality. ⁶
Survivor	A person who has experienced GBVH and survived. The terms "victim" and "survivor" are often used interchangeably. "Survivor" is the term generally preferred in the psychological and social support sectors. Note: Terminology between survivor and victim is debated and depends on the perception of the affected individual. Persons subject to GBVH can be affected in many ways, physically and mentally, depending on the severity and nature of the incident.
Survivor-centred approach	People affected by GBVH are referred to as 'survivors' to highlight their strength and resilience. This approach shifts the focus from helplessness to empowerment and recovery. It fosters dignity, respect, and support, encouraging healing and reinforcing people's ability to overcome adversity.
Transactional sex	Transactional sex relationships are non-commercial, non-marital sexual relationships motivated by the implicit assumption that sex is exchanged for material goods or other benefits. ⁷
Victim	A person who has experienced GBVH. "Victim" is a term more often used in the legal and medical sectors.
Violence and harassment	A range of unacceptable behaviours and practices, or threats thereof, whether a single occurrence or repeated, that aim at, result in, or are likely to result in physical, psychological, sexual or economic harm, and includes gender-based violence and harassment.
Worker	A person carrying out activities on, or related to, the activities of a company or their business partners. This includes people employed directly or through third parties, such as contractors, subcontractors, labour agencies or suppliers. This includes people in high and low-skilled positions, those engaged informally, in training, interns and apprentices, workers whose employment has been terminated, volunteers, jobseekers and job applicants.
